A SALUTE TO THE MILWAUKEE BAR ASSOCIATION ON THE OCCASION OF ITS 100th ANNIVERSARY

The Marquette University Law School, which in 1958-59 will celebrate 50 years of service in the Midwest, salutes the Milwaukee Bar Association in its 100th Anniversary Year.

By way of commemorating the occasion the Marquette Law Review publishes in this issue the public affairs discussion — LABOR UNIONS AND THE PUBLIC INTEREST — which the Milwaukee Bar Association presented to an audience of 1,100 in the Auditorium of Brooks Memorial Union of Marquette University as a highlight of activities in celebration of 100 years of service to the Milwaukee community.

From its inception 100 years ago, the Milwaukee Bar Association and the many illustrious men who have been members have consistently endeavored to insure the free and complete discussion of social, political and economic influences from the standpoint of their impact upon the rights and liberties of individuals, the community and business concerns.

One problem frequently discussed and of fundamental significance to the public was the impact of big business upon the rights of individual workers.

A related problem has currently drawn the spotlight. It is the problem as to whether the bigness and power of labor unions give them a monopoly position in their relation to the individual worker and the community.

The selection by the Milwaukee Bar Association of the topic — LABOR UNIONS AND THE PUBLIC INTEREST — was in the best tradition of public service. As befits the role of an organization which fosters free discussion the Milwaukee Bar Association made available three talks by speakers of renown with varied backgrounds and approaches.

The Marquette Law Review is proud to reproduce the presentations.
