SYMPOSIUM

INTERNATIONAL SPORTS LAW & BUSINESS IN THE 21ST CENTURY

The articles in the symposium portion of this issue of the Marquette Sports Law Review represent contributions from participants at the International Sports Law & Business in the 21st Century conference hosted by the National Sports Law Institute of Marquette University Law School and the International Association of Sports Law on September 25 and 26, 2003. The articles presented here are based on presentations given during the following panels at the conference:

- The articles from Dr. Dimitrios Panagiotopoulos, Professor James Nafziger and Nathalie Korchia are based on their presentations of the same title given as part of the Resolution of Sports Disputes panel on Friday September 26, 2003.
- Dr. Klaus Vieweg's article is based on his presentation given as part of the Drug Testing in Sports panel on Thursday September 25, 2003.
- Professor Stephen Ross' article is based in part on the presentation he gave as part of the International Player Restraints and Competition Law panel on Thursday September 25, 2003.
- Mikhail Loukine's article is based on his presentation given as part of the Internationalization of Sports panel on Friday September 26, 2003.
- Michael Siebold, Angela Klingmüller and Martin Greenberg's articles are based on their presentations of the same title given as part of the Sports Facility Financing, Development and Safety panel on Thursday September 25, 2003.

Complete materials from this conference, including materials from individuals not included in this symposium issue, are available from the National Sports Law Institute. Interested individuals should contact NSLI Associate Director Paul Anderson (paul.anderson@mu.edu) for further information.
